George Remo, who drives a four horse wood team for Arthur Martia had an exciting ride this morning which he does not care to have happen a second time. He was driving the four down the steep East street hill when one of the horses began to kick, and then all four started on the run down the hill. They turned the sharp corner at the intersection of Eastern avenue, the wagon making the turn on two wheels. Mr. Remo finally pulled them up after running down Eastern avenue as far as Elm street extension. The horse that started the trouble was badly scratched up about the legs where it had kicked and jumped over the pole.

A pair of horses, owned by Page brothers, made a lively runaway on Main street about 9 o'clock last evening. They were being driven by Herman Allen and in passing an electric on South Main street they jumped and one of the irons on the neck broke. The horses then started on the run down Main street. In front of Drown's drug store they collided with Geo. Cassie's team and broke down a wheel on the latter's wagon. Mr. Allen pluckily held to the reins and was finally able to bring the horses to a stop when they had dashed down the street as far as the foundry at North Barre. The team fortunately escaped without any injury.
